ever, Will Be Given During Lenten Season.

Officially, Washington's social season terminates with the Army and Navy reception at the White House this coming Tuesday night, going out with the blaze of glory usually attendant upon this function each season. Although Ash Wednesday, the following day, rings down the curtain of Lent, there are still on the schedule numerous entertainments for official personages, and the White House program includes a series of musical events, so that there will be really no cessation of gayety. Bids to these White House musicales are the most coveted of any going out from the Executive Mansion, as they are extended only to Mrs. Taft's circle of intimates, those who bask in the personal favor of the Presidential fam-

A forerunner of those planned for the Lenten season took place at the White House yesterday, when Mrs l'aft received a small company of her close friends informally in the Red Room at the tea hour, having Miss Alice Neilson to sing

During Lenten Season. George Washington's Birthday, Febuary 22, when the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and Mrs. Nagel will give their dinner to the President and February 29, when the Secretary of War and Mrs. Stimson, who have been in mourning all winter, will entertain him, are two dates for official functions which have been run over into the lenten season.

Dancing is practically the only form of hospitality which will be in any way diminished by the penitential season. Americans are coming to be the greatest devotees of the terpschlorean art in the world. There are more balls each week nowadays in the National Capital than were given in a whole sea-son twenty years ago. Practically every night there is some function of importance at which there is dancing. Notable among such events of the week just past, was the old-fashioned Vaientine party given Wednesday night at the Washington Barracks by Gen. and Mrs. William L. Marshall for their daughter. Miss Maitland Marshall. The he Washington Barracks by Gen. and Mrs. William L. Marshall for their laughter. Miss Maitland Marshall. The daughter, Miss Maitland Marshall. The two hundred or more guests went in the costumes of the antebellum days and a negro orchestra played a program of square dances. Supper was served at a long table laden with whole Virginia hams, stuffed roasted turkeys, and other like substantial viands. Lighted candles in tall silver candelabra were the only illumination and seldom has the Officers' Club at the barracks presented a prettier picture than on this occasion. Southern smilex and red flowers festooned the wails, the finishing touch to the exceptionally picturesque scene was the huge log fire on the hearth. huge log fire on the hearth
